

CHIEF PROPERTY OFFICER

- National responsibility for capital assets
- Newly created transformational leadership role

Over the past year The Salvation Army (TSA) has worked towards joining the two major Australian territories into one unified organisation that will deliver an aligned vision, united voice and the ability to make an even greater impact on the many people who depend upon its services.

The Chief Property Officer will provide leadership and stewardship to transform the management and maintenance of TSA's residential and commercial properties throughout Australia, using professional expertise to develop innovative and effective ways to maximise the utilisation and value of these significant capital assets. This role will be instrumental in leading the existing territorial property teams through transition to a unified property function.

The successful candidate will have extensive leadership experience in a multi-faceted residential and commercial property organisation with a strong market interface, and be a strategic thinker who can balance 'big picture' commercial focus with individual property needs. Strong project management experience is essential with the ability to generate innovative options and ideas. Tertiary qualifications in property will be highly regarded.

Use your vision and expertise to contribute to the wonderful work of this values-based organisation. Please apply to cv@dakinmayers.com.au by 26 June. Call Philip Mayers on 9629 6999 for more information.
